Abstract of Information Available

Human remains representing, at least, one individual have been identified. No associated funerary objects are present. The individual was removed from Buzzard Cave likely located on the Glover Farm, also referred to as the Glover Site, in Christian County, Kentucky. The individual was removed by Raymond C. Vietzen (1907–1995), likely in 1962. While there is no record regarding potentially hazardous substances having been used to treat the human remains, tape and an unidentified adhesive are present. It is unknown when the tape and adhesive were applied.

Human remains representing, at least, two individuals have been identified. The five associated funerary objects are modified faunal remains and unmodified faunal remains. The individuals and associated funerary objects were removed from Dry Cave located on the Glover Farm, also referred to as the Glover Site, in Christian County, Kentucky. The individuals and associated funerary objects were removed by Raymond C. Vietzen (1907–1995), likely in the 1950s, probably 1953 and 1955. While there is no record regarding potentially hazardous substances having been used to treat the human remains and associated funerary objects, an unidentified adhesive is present. It is unknown when the adhesive was applied.

Human remains representing, at least, 14 individuals have been identified. The 14 associated funerary objects are a lithic, modified faunal remains, possible shell, shell, and unmodified faunal remains. The individuals and associated funerary objects were removed from Glover's Cave located on the Glover Farm, also referred to as the Glover Site, in Christian County, Kentucky, by Raymond C. Vietzen (1907–1995), likely between approximately 1941 and the mid-1960s. While there is no record regarding potentially hazardous substances having been used to treat the human remains, unidentified adhesives, an unidentified plaster or similar type of substance, and an unidentified preservative coating, consolidant, or sealant are present. An unidentified adhesive was used to attach a small piece of fabric to some of the human remains. It is unknown when these materials and substances were applied. A residue, likely from tape, is present on some of the human remains. An unidentified adhesive was applied to some of the associated funerary objects. It is unknown when the adhesive was applied.

Vietzen, an avocational archaeologist, collector, and author, established the Indian Ridge Museum in Elyria, Ohio, and the Archaeological Society of Ohio (formerly the Ohio Indian Relic Collectors Society). The Indian Ridge Museum, founded in the 1930s, served as Vietzen's laboratory and repository, and it remained in operation until the mid-1990s. After Vietzen's death, the facility fell into disrepair, and most of the items he had acquired and housed at the museum were sold. In 1998, the Ohio Historical Society (presently the Ohio History Connection) removed ancestral human remains and some of the remaining items from the facility and temporarily housed them at the Ohio Historical Society. In October of 2003, these remains were transferred from the Ohio Historical Society to Mercyhurst College (presently Mercyhurst University).
